

The benefit of broadband to rural health care, particularly community health centers, would enable true access to telemedical services, educational extensions to rural providers, options for responding to emergency situations (natural or terrorism), market place competition for quality of service between power companies and telecom companies would be to the benefit of consumers.